A man describes to us Aelbert Cuyp's Dutch masterpiece "Landscape with Cattle".

MVO1: Okay, well it's a cloudy day. We've got two cows by a tree. Ah, one is fawn and the other looks to be brown - quite clearly. There's five sheep - ah they're white - and on the left, on left you've got, um, a peasant smiling brightly as he torments a very angry looking goat with a pole. Not sure why. And, and he's wearing ugh boots.

MVO2: The Dutch Masters from the Rijksmuseum. You really need to see them. Only at the National Gallery of Victoria 'til October 2nd.
