

BAD THINGS HAPPEN - SFX

NOTE: This ad played simultaneously across all Adelaide's radio stations.

We hear a fake retail ad for dog food. Suddenly we hear the sound of radio interference. A geeky voice cuts through the static.

GEEK: Greetings. I have taken over all the radio stations.
Go ahead – try changing the channel. I'm everywhere.
And now you can't escape my podcast on sci-fi sound effects.

SFX: Lightsaber.

GEEK: That's a lightsaber.

SFX: Laser.

GEEK: That's a laser.

SFX: Phaser.

GEEK: That's a phaser.

SFX: Spaceship.

GEEK: That's a spaceship.

Oh, am I boring you.

Do you want to listen to some popular music instead?

Well, change the channel.

Oh wait! I'm everywhere.

SFX: Man screaming and bursting viscera.

GEEK: That's an alien bursting out of a man's body.

BAD THINGS HAPPEN – HAWKING AND EINSTEIN

We hear a fake retail ad for an Italian restaurant. Suddenly we hear the sound of radio interference. A geeky voice cuts through the static.

GEEK: Greetings. I've hijacked the airwaves to bring you my fanfiction series entitled Hawking and Einstein's Adventures in Space and Time [German accent] Zee time machine is a success, Stephen Hawking. Vot should we do first?

SFX: He hits a button to activate a Hawking-esque computer-generated voice that says "let's hunt dinosaurs."

LOGO: Internode. No other network compares.

BAD THINGS HAPPEN - SCHEDULE

We hear a fake retail ad for a dating service. Suddenly we hear the sound of radio interference. A geeky voice cuts through the static.

GEEK: I've invaded the airwaves and now I'm going to teach you a valuable lesson.

Schedule is pronounced with a K sound. Not SHED-ule.

And if you think otherwise, then obviously you weren't taught right at SHOOOL.

Sked-ule, sked-ule, sked-ule.
