No Coincidence

For a man at the races to navigate his way to the bar, secure a drink, study the form, look at the trainers, look at the jockeys, don't look at the jockey's colours, pick a horse, change his mind, watch a race at another place, head to the yard, head to the ring, pick another horse, and eat a pie takes 40 minutes. Exactly the same time between each race. This is no coincidence.
